

Does it Pay to Serve Good Food?

Frederic Warzynski,

Department of Economics

Aarhus School of Business

University of Aarhus

Prismet - Silkeborgvej, 2 (Office 616)

8000 Aarhus - DENMARK

email: fwa@asb.dk

and

Mikel Tapia

Department of Business Administration

Universidad Carlos III de Madrid

mtapia @ emp.uc3m.es

Abstract

In this paper, we use accounting data from the population of French restaurants over the period 1998-2006 and relate restaurant's profitability and markup to food quality, as assessed by gastronomy experts. We illustrate the following trade-off: higher reputation allows firms to charge higher prices, but also forces them to incur higher costs to maintain their reputation.